Citizens Urged to Support Community Hall Project

The Irma and District Board of Trade called a meeting on November 9th for the purpose of finding the reaction of the people of the district to the idea of a community hall.

The results were indeed gratifying and resulted in the formation of the Irma Community Hall Association. Mr. V. Hutchinson was elected president, J. Jackson, vice-president, R. B. Kirkman, Secretary-Treasurer, A. C. Archibald, Treasurer.

There was much discussion on the project of HOW to raise the amount of money necessary for the project, but it was decided that the most plausible method would be to start the fund by public subscription, and then add to it by raising money in what ever manner presented itself. The executive realizes that this is no small undertaking and so urges the people of Irma and district to get behind them and push with all that they have in them to show that we can put it over.

Come on now citizens, we've got the organization, we've got the start of a plan and I'm sure that we've got the spirit to show some of the Doubting Thomas's that it can be done. Let's forget our past differences and work together in the present to guarantee a more pleasant future.

BUFFALO COULEE W.I. HOLDS BAZAAR

On Friday, November 12th, a most successful bazaar and social evening was held at Albert school.

The evening opened with the majority of the people enjoying a game of cards. The winners in this were; Ladies first, Mrs. H. Johnston; Men's first, Mr. Bob Lukens; Ladies low, Mrs. H. Larson and Men's low, Mr. Claude Ramsay.

The sale of sewing and fancy work was held in the basement and really showed a wide variety of work. The table containing the fancy work attracted the biggest crowd and was soon empty.

There was a fish pond for the children, and also a sale of home-made candy.

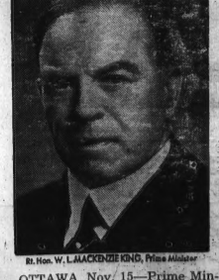

After lunch a most successful dance brought the evening to a close.

The ladies would like to thank everyone who helped in any way to make the evening the success it was.

Wedding Bells

CARTER — OAKES

A very beautiful wedding took place in St. Mary's Church, Irma, on November 12th, when Betty Sophia, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carter, became the bride of Thomas E. Oakes, son of Mrs. W. J. Oakes, and the late Mr. W. J. Oakes of Sedgewick. Rev. Smith officiated.

The bride wore a nylon taffeta dress with lace yoke and lily point sleeves, with a full length veil held in place by sprays of orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a double strand of pearls, gift of the groom. She carried a white prayer book, decorated with rosebuds and streamers which her mother and two sisters also carried when they were married. The bride's sister, Shirley, dressed in a turquoise floor length crepe dress, carrying roses, was her only attendant. The groom's brother Eric acted as best man.

Miss M. Comley played the wedding march. Immediately following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents to immediate family and a few friends.

Going away, the bride wore a fuschia wool dress topped by fur coat and a white ermine half hat. After a short honeymoon trip, they will make their home in Kinsella.

Out of town guests were old friends, Mr. and Mrs. Jablonski and son Melvin of Lougheed.

GREER — GILBERT

St. Thomas' Anglican Church was the scene of a quiet wedding on Wednesday, November 3rd, when Mrs. Rachel Gilbert of Irma was united in marriage to Mr. John Martin Greer, also of Irma.

Mrs. Meta Glover acted as matron of honor and Mr. Paul Girard, brother-in-law of the groom was best man.

Rev. F. E. Smith officiated.

REMEMBRANCE DAY, 1948

We spent the day till eventide
Remembering. On "the other side"
Beyond the pale of human life—
Beyond the reach of mortal strife—
Past all the tangled snarls of earth,
Where selfish evils have their birth
Our dear ones who have passed along
With peace or joy or funeral song,
Whether they came from east or west,
Marched the trumpet call abreast,
or if in quiet, home-lit fires
They made their sacrificial pyres,
They gave their love's service full and free
For benefit of wide degree
Or just amid a silent strife
They lay their hearts, as huband, wife,
Or sister, brother, son so dear,
Or parents nobly human. Here
We stand in full and reverent mood,
A tribute to their service good.
Whoever gives his human life
To purify, uplift, earth strife
I reverenced, dearly loved, today,
For having plucked some thorns away
And carried them in pain-torn hands
To benefit world nations' lands.
There are no words to quite express
The eminence on them we press,
We know their gift has gone before,
bequeathing us an honored lore;
And as we see their clean ideal
We recognize more true, more real,
The high concepts of love and truth
That were our dreams of life in youth;
We know that justice paves the way
To happiness some future day.
And while we wait and serve we know
The future beckons in a glow;
As in the past unselfishness
Ranks high, relieving earth's distress
And nobleness of heart and soul
Will lead us to our destined goal.

Nancy O. Parke.

MOTORISTS WARNED OF CARBON MONOXIDE

Now that the cold weather season is approaching in Alberta warning is sounded for car drivers of the dangers of carbon monoxide fumes.

Each year there are instances of the dreadful effects of these poisonous fumes, and they take their death toll despite the appeals to motorists to be on guard.

Many old type cars are on the highways and the drivers of these vehicles should in particular be on the alert against carbon monoxide.

One car expert stresses the need of a thorough car check-up at this period to ensure against carbon monoxide and also to locate any car defects that should be remedied prior to the winter period. Much can be done through proper winterizing to make certain that the vehicle is in proper shape.

Guard against carbon monoxide by having a window open to admit fresh air when starting up the car in the garage. Fatal accidents have occurred when this precaution was neglected.

Always remember that carbon monoxide is a deadly lurking menace. Take no chances. Advise others to do the same. That will mean fewer motor driving fatalities this winter.

VIKING ITEMS

Human interest in blessed events is the same the world over. The arrival of a new baby in the average home is a great occasion for the family at least. But when a baby is born to a royal couple it interests the whole world. The baby boy born to Princess Elizabeth and her husband the Duke of Edinburgh on Sunday was heralded with delight throughout the British Empire. This boy may be the future king of Britain. Time marches on.

The Alberta government made a wise move when they named a committee of four to study the question of Alberta's natural gas reserves and subsequently make submissions to the newly appointed government natural gas commission. It is of special interest to the people of this community as the Viking-Kinsella natural gas field is one of the largest on the north American continent. This field already serves Edmonton and all intervening towns. There is a line from this field also serving Vegreville, and another line completed last year that serves towns all the way to Red Deer including Camrose. All these larger centres are heavy users of natural gas and the use will expand as more manufacturing plants are established. There is a movement on foot to extend the gas line services to the States on the Pacific coast and another to construct lines to Winnipeg east. The conservation committee has a most important job to do for the government and advising them as to the extent to which natural gas can be exported —if any. The needs of our own people for years to come should have first consideration. Many other towns not served by natural gas lines would be glad to have this service. Natural gas service should be a great drawing card for future immigration and commercial projects in Alberta.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

THE WINNER?

"A Teacher Must Be Dignified At All Times"

By JESSICA CALLOW

THE Varrallee town council had convened to discuss the problem of repairing the bridge that spanned the creek running between the townships of Varrallee and Barracombe. The much-used bridge was a definite short cut for dwellers on both sides. However, only one board of the original bridge remained and this, be it noted, was six inches under water.

Letters of complaint were beginning to come in. The mail man had got his feet wet. His attack of "flu" and subsequent disarrangement in delivery of ever-important mail was due to the negligence of those whose duty it was to fix the bridge.

The teacher's feet were wet night and morning, pupils' wet feet disrupted the classes for half an hour each morning whilst stockings were dried over the register. Someone else could not buy rubbers anywhere and was fast ruining a five-dollar pair of shoes. Please, couldn't something be done by the council?

There was the stumbling block that each township considered it the other's obligation. The teacher's wet feet particularly bothered Roy Mansfield of Varrallee. On the other hand Myron Halliday was inclined to be flippant about all the wet feet mentioned.

"Why can't the teacher take a run at it?" he said. "I could jump it easily myself with her in my arms." He looked at Roy with a twinkle in his eyes.

"Rubbish, a teacher must be dignified at all times." With a snort Roy picked up another letter and thrust it under Myron's nose who in turn pushed it under the nose of his neighbor after fumigating it for a couple of minutes.

"The mail man then, what's the matter with him wearing his long rubbers and wading a bit. That water goes down later on in the season."

"Humph, he'd need a diver's suit. Says he'd get one if his pay ran to it. Anyway, he slipped in once and got some letters wet. Been the very dickens to pay over that."

"Well, the school children, about them. Now wait, you don't need to tell me a thing. You won't keep kids out of water no matter if we put up a dozen bridges."

"I think," said Roy, still remembering the teacher, "that we should fix the bridge."

"We fixed it the last time, it's getting to be a habit."

"D'you know what it'll cost?" chimed in Tom Deering as he drew out his pen.

"With wood the price it is, and I'll tell you it's got to be built up at either end this time, it's a waste of time and money setting it low to get washed out again. It'll cost, lemme see—"

Tom began to scribble laboriously on an envelope.

"Never mind it, Tom," drawled Myron, getting up and walking round with his hands in his pockets, "I think we shouldn't decide anything for a day or two at least. Let's walk down by the horseshoe pitch. I got a letter to post."

"Oh, you and your horse shoes," Roy flared up for a minute. "You're getting to be as bad as Barracombe's Bob Spaulding. Only difference is, Bob's a good councilman. Why can't we get this settled?" Quite unruffled, Myron got out his pipe and blew a cloud of smoke towards the ceiling.

"Sooner than you think, my boy. Just a little patience, old chap, and I'll bet you, yes I'll bet you a box of cigars to a new pipe that Barracombe will fix the bridge."

"Ha, you're on and don't say you didn't remember my brand. Barracombe will never do it."

"I need a new pipe," said Myron. "Be here Wednesday, I'll have something to show you. And say, I want to borrow a few pairs of bedroom slippers. I only got one pair."

"One pair at a time is enough for most folks," said Roy sarcastically. "What in the world do you want all those slippers for?"

"I might want to practice ballet dancing in my spare time."

"Well, O.K., if it's to help you reduce I suppose it's in a good cause. My gosh, no wonder the bridge didn't last."

Wednesday saw the three men again in Myron's big living room. Three other portly gentlemen were also present. Though comfortable and seemingly very happy, the visiting gentlemen sat with sockless feet thrust into borrowed slippers, their shoes tilted inside the fender draining onto the hearth whilst their socks hung like a row of kippers on the fire screen.

Later, and until after dusk, the clang of horse shoes rang from the plot of land down the road. Two large electric lights pierced the haze of much cigar smoke. Laughter and speculative talk ran to and fro. This performance was repeated the next night even to the drying of the socks. All talk on both sides of the creek that day had been concerning the match that the old boys of Barracombe had been challenged to. Nothing would have deterred the interested Barracombers from attending. Bob Spaulding, they said, was unbeatable, yet in some way a rumor had got around that this time he'd never make it.

Myron looked thoughtful as he solicitiously arranged the socks once more upon the fire screen. The following night as the contestants walked in a smile spread over his features. The feet of all the visitors were conspicuously dry. What matter that the challengers lost the match. A game is played for the good it gives to all in the playing.

"You never had a pipe like this one, 'My'." It was Roy who spoke as he pulled a package from his pocket. The two stood admiring the new bridge complete with hand rail, over which the winning Barracombers had walked dry shod at last.

West Farmers Facing Threat Of Drought

WINNIPEG. — Western Canadian farmers, facing a threat of scanty markets for their wheat on the one hand, and uncertain growing conditions on the other, are looking to 1949 with a certain degree of anxiety.

A warning that Canada, and other grain-growing countries, may be hard pressed to find adequate markets has come from British grain experts. Their prediction is based on the belief that grain will be plentiful next year following large increases in wheat stocks recorded by many countries this year.

Chief Commissioner George McIvor of the Canadian Wheat Board, however, is hopeful that Canada will be able to dispose of her wheat next year.

Western farmers, while scanning the market situation with a careful eye, are more concerned with crop conditions. They fear that a large-scale drought may be experienced next summer unless heavy winter snowfalls and substantial spring rains bring moisture to dry areas.

Last summer moisture conditions were good throughout the West and farmers reaped a bumper crop. But this fall has been described as the driest within memory of many farmers and they are uncertain what to expect next year.

Moisture for spring-seeded crops is not the only problem worrying farmers. The dry fall has left top soil hard and cracked and curtailed fall rye seeding. In some areas the soil is reported so hard that plows have been unable to do more than dent the surface.

Chicken Disease And Polio Has No Connection

EDMONTON. — Dr. J. A. Gillett, Alberta director of communicable diseases, said there is no indication of any connection between the frequency of poliomyelitis and a type of paralysis which attacks chickens.

He said reports that many chickens in the New Brigden district of the province were dying from a type of paralysis while eight persons contracted polio were "coincidence".

Doctors had advanced the theory that the two diseases might be connected. 2802

Just Plain Folks

A recent editorial in The Rosetown, Sask., Eagle had the following which truly depicts the rural community life:

"Last Monday, after lunch, we had reason to call at the office of a well known resident of Rosetown. We were very busy at the time, but as the business was important and could not be transacted over the phone, we took time off and walked down to see him.

He was out, but had left a note on his office door clearly stating the reason for his absence. It read ...

"Must fix the clothes line. Should be finished by 3 o'clock."

Had his door been locked with no reason given, we would have been quite annoyed.

And, had the usual "Be back at a certain time" not been used, we would not have felt much happier either.

Here was a man who still has the common touch. One who knew that his friends would know that a broken clothes line on a Monday was a very serious thing.

That's why we like living in a rural community. Not just because a man took time off to do a household chore, but because in our way of life men are still big enough to be just plain folks."

Tourists Returning

Historic City Of Versailles, France, Restored To Full Glory

VERSAILLES, France.—Four years after the last German left Versailles, this historic city of statues and tapestries has been restored to its full glory. Thousands of tourists are flocking back to see the palatial chateau immortalized by Louis XIV, the Grand and Petit Trianons where Marie Antoinette once lived; the garden lakes, the fountains and monuments that have been reproduced all over the world.

Now as before the war Versailles caterers seek to satisfy all tastes. In typical French cafes along the wide, tree-lined Avenue de Chateau, English breakfasts are served, and at four in the afternoon the large, white walled dining room of he Hotel D'Angleterre takes on the aspect of an English tea room.

Food that Britons seldom see nowadays—steaks, chops, hams and eggs—are available in plenty and devaluation of the franc has brought them within the reach of small wage earners from Britain.

Despite the four-year German occupation and occasional Allied bombings, Versailles suffered no appreciable damage though the palaces and gardens of the chateau deteriorated through neglect.

Damp due to the lack of heating, caused fading and bulging through mouldiness of many famous tapestries and paintings, but this has been remedied by chemical treatment and the classic gardens, weedy and unkempt when the Germans left, have been restored to a well-ordered riot of color.

An official said that Germans and many French collaborators carried on a four-year hunt for valuables spirited away from the palace for safe-keeping in 1939, but never unearthed a single piece.

In cafe bars along the Avenue de Chateau men and women still tell how, when the Germans evacuated Versailles on Aug. 11, 1944, they ordered the authorities to give a ceremonial burial to 113 Germans blown up while loading anti-tank mines.

A few days later, as French troops failed to arrive, the Germans returned. Finding the dead soldiers had been interred as requested, they presented the population with a large allowance of flour and rice. Soon after they left for good as French tanks rolled into the town on their way to Paris.

"There were a few personal farewells but most people watched them go in silence," a police official said.

Rhubarb May Soon Be Among Aristocrats

Fruit and vegetables are in conflict again. This time the former is laying definite claim to rhubarb—a claim that a court has been asked to sustain. After a long period of controversy, the tomato was snatched from the vegetable family and set up as a fruit. Then along came the melon with a "me too" claim to whatever aristocracy may be attached to the fruit group, and apparently won out sufficiently to be given a fruit rating by Mr. Webster.

Even the nut has gained recognition as a hard-shelled fruit, and one wonders what other desertions are facing the vegetable family. The poor squash that may lie in friendship alongside the melon in the garden apparently is destined to remain a vegetable. Likewise the ever-popular celery, the stem of which bears a striking resemblance to the somewhat larger stalk of rhubarb. But, come what may, whether vegetable or fruit, the rhubarb pie, with its strips of flaky crust across the top, still takes the cake.

Collecting eggs in wire baskets for fast cooling is one way to put better quality eggs on the market.

Latest Styles In Women's Fashions

The latest in women's fashions—a classic suit and coat of a worsted type gabardine made by blending nylon staple fibre with wool—is shown at left. Addition of 20 per cent. nylon staple to woollen yarns imparts crease-resistance and greater strength to the finished fabric, it is claimed. Apparel shown is considered superior in quality and costs less than garments of pure worsted. Nylon staple was introduced in Canada for the first time this year. High-cut but dainty all Canadian-made bootees shown at right. The pair at top are made of black suede with tie at back. The pair below gives a Canadian stylist's version of the covered look in fall shoes. This pair is made of tailleur green suede with ruff effect trimmed with gold belt, ideal for evening wear.

More Women Travelling On Roads Unescorted

NEW YORK. — Highways of the United States now are comparatively free of two-legged wolves.

More unescorted women are travelling than ever before, says Carol Lane, a travel bureau director who has just returned from the west. She adds:

"Motor travel presents no special problems for women travelling unescorted by men. Women won't find any trouble unless they're looking for it."

Here and there, hazards still exist but a few simple rules, Miss Lane says, will keep the woman traveller on the road of propriety. Miss Lane covers thousands of miles a year on auto trips for an oil company, investigating all kinds of travel problems.

For example, she warns that if you want to avoid the wrong kind of tourist cabins, don't pick a camp where:

1. Most of the cars bear licence plates from the same state in which the cabins are located (unless the state is very large).

2. The proprietor doesn't require you to register or give you a chance to inspect your lodgings first.

3. There is a bar in front.

"Above all, a lady traveller must act and dress like a lady," says Miss Lane. "A good strategy, for example, is a playsuit with a detachable skirt. While driving, the skirt can be neatly folded across a seat. It can be whisked easily around the hips when coming into a filling station or restaurant."

Miss Lane herself is a comely young brunette. She recently completed a two-month, 11,000-mile auto trip through the Rockies and southwest United States, visiting 13 parks, picking up helpful hints on what to see, where to eat, how to picnic on the road, what to carry along for comfort.

While on the road, Miss Lane is always equipped with various tourist guides to help her decide on a restaurant. If these sources fail in a strange town, she invariably seeks out a drug store.

"Pharmacists are usually open late," she says. "They know their town and they're considerate."

Other bits of intelligence picked up on the road by Miss Lane include: teachers are the best travellers because they have the most time and "they're most curious about things; with picnics now and then, you can eat for about $3 a day on the road; if your car breaks down on a lonely road and you can't fix it yourself, it's best to wait for a long-haul truck driver because he can "usually fix everything."

ORDERS ARE ORDERS IN SPITE OF WEATHER

Climbing Parliament Hill during a steady downpour of rain, a press gallery correspondent saw a sight that seemed incredible. A man, wrapped in a huge slicker, was watering the lawn.

First glancing at the Peace Tower to make sure that he was truly in Ottawa, the reporter strolled towards the busy gardener, who turned out to be a man on the payroll of the Department of Public Works.

"What's the sense of this?" he asked.

The gardener shrugged his shoulders.

"I've got orders to water the lawn on Thursdays," he answered.

France has issued stamps to the current meeting of the United Nations, showing two views of the Palais de Chaillot at Paris (top left and right), and a stamp for a new power dam at Genissiat (lower centre). Australia has issued a stamp to Sir F. Mueller, botanist, who died 42 years ago (top centre). Netherlands has issued a stamp to Queen Juliana in connection with her recent coronation (lower left). Argentina has issued a stamp to agriculture, showing a farming family (lower right).

Liechtenstein, the small principality between Switzerland and Germany, is to issue a stamp shortly showing Icarus, the mythical man who is supposed to have been the first human to fly, wearing wings of feathers fastened to his body with wax. The story goes that when he neared the sun, the wax melted, and he fell to earth. The new stamp will be a 10 francs value.

United States Fort Bliss stamp.

Liechtenstein is a popular country with many collectors, as it issues frequent, but beautifully printed stamps. The stamps are printed in Switzerland, the government of which administers the post office of Liechtenstein. Stamps are a basic source of revenue for the small principality, which makes it other main income from tourists, and taxes on international companies which have their head-office there.

United States Will Rogers stamp.

Many fine stamp issues have come from Liechtenstein in recent years. Most of these are pictorials, some show native animals and birds, others members of the princely family, and people of the small country. First stamps were issued in 1912, when the Australian government looked after the post office.

The first stamps showed Prince John, then ruler of the country. A pictorial set was issued in 1920, followed by a set with a religious motive. In 1920 the country's own government looked after the post office, but in 1921 Switzerland took over the task. More scenics, coat-of-arms designs and late portraits of Prince John appeared. In 1928, when Prince John had ruled for 70 years, stamps featuring him as boy and aged monarch were issued. In 1929 Prince Francis came to the throne and was featured with his princess. More scenics followed for some years, each set finer than the previous.

Prince Franz Joseph II came to the throne in 1939, being featured on a stamp issue. In 1940 there was a set to a century since Prince John's birth. Then followed a set to people of the principality, and a number of historical sets during the war. In 1943 and 1944 long pictorial sets were issued, and in 1946 animals were featured for the first time. There have been some semi-postal sets and airmail sets since 1930, most of which have featured a variety of birds of this Alpine country.

New issues ... United States issues three cents to humorist Will Rogers on Nov. 4, and to the centenary of Fort Bliss, Tex., the following day ... France has issued two stamps to the United Nations meet and a stamp to a new dam ... Spain has added historical figures to the current set ... Costa Rica has issued a stamp to Bishop Bernardo Thiel, an explorer and ethonologist who was Bishop of San Jose for many years ... Romania has issued a set to its press ... Iceland is to issue a stamp portraying the Tekla volcano ... United Nations is to issue its own stamps, according to a news report from Paris, stamps being issued to raise funds and for publicity purposes.

Post-War Housing Units Are Interfering With Young Courtship

NEW YORK. — Designers of the post-war home in America are interfering with young courtships, a social planner said recently. Dr. Bryn J. Hovde, president of the new school for social research, believes that the millions of new homes needed in the country should be built with a scientific approach.

The housing units are being built too small; too smug; too crowded; they are driving people to "escape".

He says all of that and more.

For instance, Dr. Hovde said that "too little closet and storage space may actually impose upon the occupants of an apartment an unsatisfactory way of living."

Where to put the baby carriage, the tricycle, or the bicycle has not been taken into consideration, he believes.

And what's happened to the old-fashioned kitchen? Time was—and still is—that the lower-income families like to spend a large part of their time and "conduct family activities in the kitchen," he says.

Nowadays, designers leave only enough room for cooking in the kitchen, according to Hovde.

Furthermore, the designers are interfering with young courtships. Said Hovde:

"The dwindling size of city apartments compels young people to conduct their courtships on the streets, in commercial places of business, in public parks, or in automobiles, rather than in one another's homes."

Apartments, he contends, are built so small that no privacy is possible there.

The problem should be tackled by the social scientists who should decide just how much room a family needs.

Dr. Hovde says that studies show bad neighborhoods have more than their share of persons who enter mental institutions.

He said there is no problem when a family has the money to buy or build a tailor-made home.

It is multiple dwellings—structures made for the purpose of renting to middle or low class families—that are the problem, he contends.

Royalty Just People For Stationmaster

LONDON.—The man who said he slapped a princess, spoke the British equivalent of "nuts" to a duke and locked up King George VI is dead at 88. He was Samuel Thomas Maun, railroad stationmaster at Windsor from 1903 to 1925.

In his memoirs, Maun wrote that he smacked Princess Alice, a cousin of the king, by accident when he took a hefty swing at a fly with a newspaper. His altercation with the duke—not named in the memoirs—occurred when Maun refused to hold a train.

He locked up the present king, he said, when George was in knee pants. George, Maun related, was waiting for a train with his brothers when a racing special pulled in.

"I thought they'd get mixed up with some rough types—so I took them to a waiting room and bolted the door," Maun said.

RESTORED THROUGH STUDY

The north Pacific halibut is an example of a resource which, after undergoing extreme depletion, was restored through careful study and regulation. Intensive fishery between 1910 and 1930 depleted stocks of the fish alarmingly. Since 1930, management of the fishery by the United States and Canada, under mutual agreement, has increased the abundance and stabilized the fishery at a relatively high level of production.

The LETTER BOX

(The Times is not responsible for opinions expressed under this heading.)

To The Citizens of Irma,

Why can't we have an hotel in Irma without a beer parlor?

That is the question I have been asking myself, and others, but I have not had one satisfactory answer as yet.

Do you "Old Timers" remember when Mrs. Shaw ran the hotel, just down the street from the station? I worked there in 1922 and 1923. What was wrong with that hotel? There was no beer parlor and yet her rooms were always full. These people could have stayed at Viking or Wainwright where the hotels had beer parlors. Why didn't they? Because they said they wanted to stay at a clean respectable place.

I can't believe people have changed such a lot since then. If a hotel was built here that was kept clean and respectable it would draw the right kind of people, and be a place we all could be proud of, instead being a place we will all (if we are honest) be ashamed of.

Why do I feel so strongly against a beer parlor? Because we lived right across the street from one for five solid years. I hope no woman—or any other human being here in Irma, ever has to hear or see the horrible things I saw and heard in those five years. Our kiddies were small at that time, and on Saturday afternoons and evenings I had to bring them in and lock my doors to keep them from the things they would hear and see, and also to keep out those that were so drunk they would just wander in any place.

What is there good about a place like that? I have seen women with babies in their arms standing outside the door crying because their husbands had been there for hours, drinking and spending the money that should have gone for food and clothing for their families. I've seen little kiddies sitting on the steps waiting for their father to come out and go home with them, and too often he could hardly stagger when he did come out.

They say—"Oh look what it will do for the town. Look at the business it will bring here. Why should all this money be going some place else?" Have we all lost our sense of values? Why can't we look at the right and wrong of this thing, instead of looking at it in dollars and cents? Do we have to see our town advance regardless of what it will do to numberless homes (for it will break up many, if it is allowed to come.) You people who are going to vote for this beer parlor—do you want that on your conscience for the rest of your lives—the broken homes? And every time you see any person young or old who is staggering along the street, or who is the worse for liquor, you can say to yourselves, "I helped to do that crime."

Oh! What good will any money do any one that has been gained in such a manner! It seems like blood money to me, and I for one, want no part of money that is not gotten honestly. Remember, "Six feet of earth makes us all of one size." God doesn't care when we pass on to the other side whether we have one dollar or a million, but He does care how we make that one, or that million.

Please let us not build up our town through a beer parlor. Let us do it in such a way that we will all be proud in the years to come.

Honesty pays big dividends in happiness and peace of mind.

Let us forget our purses, and do the right thing—vote dry.

Sincerely,
Maudie Hurst.

Citizens of Irma,

On November 24th you will be called upon to cast your vote for or against a beer license in our Village.

Do not confuse the issue; it will be plainly printed on the ballots: "for a beer license," and "against a beer license," that is the real issue.

We are concerned with making Irma a better village, we are concerned with making Canada a better country, which means making better citizens and better living conditions for people to live in.

This cannot be done by furthering the sale of alcoholic beverages. The record of the traffic is a shameful blot upon history, from the days when the fur traders demoralized and robbed the Indians to this present day. Crime, suffering, and sorrow are its ony recommendations.

Beverage rooms have become a sore spot even with the brewers and distillers so we would be well advised to vote against such a thing in Irma.

I quote from MacLean's, Dec. 1, 1945, from an article which depicts scenes typical in beverage rooms.

"Watch that one," she said, pointing out an attractive young brunette, when she leans like that and puts half her cigarette in her mouth to light it, she's getting near the trouble line. Suddenly the girl got up. Her escort tried to hold her back but she shook him off. She pushed her way to a table near the centre of the room and tugged at the coat of a girl sitting there.

In a loud voice she said, "You're nothing but a dirty little so-and-so."

The girl addressed, rose like a flash and gave the aggressor a resounding slap in the face. Their escorts tangled. Before an augmented force of waiters could get to the scene, the beverage room was a mass of screaming, fainting, fighting, shouting, men and women.

The aggressor lost most of her clothes and went home in a raincoat. The beverage room closed down." End of quotation.

Similar scenes take place in beverage rooms all across Canada. Keep Irma free from such evil influences by voting "against beer licenses." on November 24th.

H. W. Inglis, Irma.

A Need For Reform

ONE OF THE GREAT SOCIAL PROBLEMS which have yet to be completely solved is that of dealing justly and effectively with those who run foul of the law. The administration of justice in British courts is known to be unsurpassed in fairness and efficiency. Canada's judiciary system is patterned after it, and in this respect criminals and all those who come in contact with the law are assured of fair and just treatment by the courts. There is, however, still need for reform in many matters connected with the handling of prisoners in jails and penitentiaries, the treatment of youthful criminals and first offenders, and the problem of rehabilitating those who are discharged from our penal institutions. The now well-known Archambault report on prison conditions in Canada contained recommendations for dealing with those problems and already steps have been taken to carry out some of these recommendations.

* * * * *

Would Require Much Money

Effective prison reform, however, requires large expenditures of public money for buildings, equipment, and the training of skilled personnel, and consequently rapid progress is not made. The matter, however, constitutes one of our greatest social problems, and every encouragement should be given to efforts which are made to improve the present system. Another matter, connected with law enforcement, was brought to the attention of the public at the recent meeting of the Canadian Bar Association. It was pointed out at this meeting that there is now no means of providing counsel for indigent prisoners or others who for various reasons are unable to retain the services of a lawyer when they are brought to trial. The state, however, retains a prosecuting attorney who is paid to gather facts and present cases against those who are accused.

* * * * *

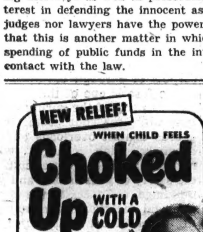

State Should Provide Lawyer

Members of the Bar Association expressed the view that, although judges are usually compassionate in cases where a prisoner has no counsel, and frequently lawyers give their services without charge to those who cannot afford to pay, there are frequent cases of injustice which would not occur if counsel was available to all who needed it. It has, in the past, been suggested that the state should retain defending attorneys as well as prosecutors, and that it should have the same interest in defending the innocent as in convicting the guilty. While neither judges nor lawyers have the power to remedy this situation, it is apparent that this is another matter in which there is need for reform, and for the spending of public funds in the interests of indigent citizens who come in contact with the law.

Labor Survey Shows Canada At High Peak

OTTAWA.—Canadian employment has hit another new peak.

In its 12th quarterly survey of the country's labor force, the Bureau of Statistics estimated that 5,042,000 persons were working in the first week of September.

That's the biggest number ever to hold jobs in Canada. It was a boost of 34,000 from a year previously.

And, at the same time, the Bureau estimated the number of unemployed had dropped to 67,000, representing decreases from last year and the year before.

Of those employed, the Bureau calculated 3,932,000 were men and 1,100,000 were women.

The figures are based on a cross-section survey of about 30,000 households. The labor force is made up of civilians of 14 and over who have jobs or are looking for work.

Lake Okanagan Dropping For First Time Since Spring Flood

KELOWNA, B.C.—Government engineers are keeping their fingers crossed and hoping Lake Okanagan can be lowered another three feet before the 1949 freshet.

The lake has dropped below the agreed maximum of 102.5 feet for the first time since Mission Creek and other valley streams flooded last June.

The drop came after 147 days of flood conditions.

Engineers have removed the lip of Okanagan Falls and straightened the Okanagan River bed south of Penticton to reduce flood conditions. Now they will try to lower Skaha Lake a foot to increase the river's flow and allow more water to flow over Penticton dam.

Action on the special flood control committee report was promised by R. D. Browne-Clayton, Coalition candidate in the Nov. 29 by-election.

The Okanagan fruit grower told electors he will work for the implementation of the report.

Many Farmers To Sow New Strain Of Wheat Next Spring

OTTAWA.—Thousands of western Canada farmers will seed the rich, prairie wheatlands next spring with a new bread grain variety which promises to yield bigger and better crops and increasing wealth for the grower. The variety is Saunders wheat, a new strain developed at the central experimental farm here, which matures earlier than other varieties, produces a larger yield per acre and is resistant to many common wheat diseases as well. It also has fine milling and bread-making qualities.

Its name comes from two Saunders famous in the experimental farm services—the late Dr. William Saunders, first director of the Dominion-operated service, and his son, the late Sir Charles Saunders, first Dominion cerealist.

No Saunders seed will be distributed next spring in Saskatchewan, Canada's major wheat-producing province, pending compilation of data from tests in northern areas of that province. The seed will not be sold in quantities of more than six bushels to a grower.

First Developed In 1938

First link in the chain of development leading to the new variety took place in 1938, when experts crossed Thatcher, one of the most-used grades on the prairies, with an early ripening variety known as Brandon.

By the spring of 1947, there were 225 bushels of Saunders seed. These were carefully grown under control at experimental stations at Beaverlodge and Lacombe in Alberta and Melfort in Saskatchewan as well as at the central experimental farm in Ottawa.

From the original 225 bushels, a harvest of 5,700 bushels of seed was reaped and distributed to 887 wheat growers for seeding last spring. Now, there are more than 100,000 bushels available and these will be distributed again next year.

Ripens Earlier

In maturity, Saunders ripens four to five days earlier than Thatcher. This is important to northern areas, where there is danger of early frost. In yield, it returns 12 to 57 bushels an acre against 10 to 50 for Thatcher and is even better when compared with Red Bobs, another of the more important varieties sown in the west.

In addition, Saunders is resistant to stem rust and loose smut and moderately resistant to bunt, black chaff and root rot.

Farmers who planted Saunders this year reported surprisingly good crops were harvested despite poor spring seeding conditions and dry weather this summer. In Alberta's Peace River country, it outyielded Thatcher three out of four times and Red Bobs three out of five.

Other reports indicated Saunders weathered August frosts in some areas better than Red Bobs.

MANY EUROPEAN FIRMS CLAMOR TO ENTER CANADA

CHATHAM, Ont.—Canada is just swinging into its real postwar boom and these are fatter days ahead. That's according to G. D. Mallory of Ottawa, director of Trade & Commerce Dept's. year-old industrial development division, in a recent statement while visiting here.

"The United States has had its turn and our chance to make hay is emerging," he said, reporting "hundreds of European firms clamoring to enter Canada."

ENOUGH CANNED PEAS

OTTAWA. — A plentiful supply of canned peas is assured for Canadians this year. The bureau of statistics estimated the 1948 commercial pack at 7,839,997 dozen cans, an increase of 2,077,542 over 1947.

LUMBER SITE SOUGHT

EDMONTON.—Another group of eastern financiers plan to acquire timber rights and a site for a $20,000,000 mill, it was learned here.

NOW HAS $116,770 — Financial notes of an 11-year-old: Little Margaret O'Brien increased her net holdings by $18,530.86 in 1947 — from $98,239.47 to $116,770.33. An accounting given superior court by the mother of the young film actress, also said that Margaret's income last year was $193,848.20, but expenditures totalled $175,317.34, including $68,695.97 for income tax.—S.N.S. photo.

Will Happen In Best Of Families

The Maple Creek News and Swift Current Sun have been crying over their respective typographical errors, which happen in the best of families.

The Sun has been taking a ribbing for reporting somebody in Swift Current received a "cost of loving bonus."

The News said that was nothing. It once reported a Maple Creek man was seen going down the street with a "travelling bag".

The name Frank means "free".

CARE IN USING ELECTRICITY

Electricity is one of the most beneficial of modern conveniences but it must be treated with respect. A second's carelessness may mean disaster.

E. B. Martin, Extension Agricultural Engineer, Alberta Department of Agriculture, warns of the danger of working with electric appliances or wiring in damp locations. In the basement, livestock buildings, and pump house, damp floors can produce an excellent ground. In the event of shock while standing on this moisture, the person involved is subject to the full effect of the charge.

Care with electricty in bath room and kitchen is essential. Never switch on electricity while in the bath. If you keep electric heaters, radios, or similar appliances out of the bath room there will be no danger of their falling into the tub and electrocuting the occupant. The Alberta Electrical Protection Act states that plug receptacles shall not be installed in the bath room. In the kitchen, never pick crumbs out of plugged-in hot plate or toaster with a knife or other metal object. More than one serious accident has resulted from this cause.

Keep all appliance cords in good repair. If they become frayed or worn replace them before they cause fire or shock. On no account run extension wires underneath carpets or through curtains.

The fuse is one of the most important parts of the wiring circuit. It is there for your protection. It guards against overloads and abnormally high charges which might heat the wiring circuit. For the safety of your family and your buildings, use fuses of the correct size and maintain them in working order. If a fuse is plugged or in any way short circuited, it offers no protection whatsoever. Fuses are not expensive; keep a supply in reserve.

If fire occurs, shut off the electricity leading to the building involved. The first impulse is to pour water on the fire, but if the water is thrown on wires that carrying electricity, the full force of the voltage will be directed through the water to the thrower. Shut off the electricty first.

"I do not believe that there is a real conflict between God and science. But there is too much indifference towards God and that must be corrected." —Most Rev. G. F. Kingston.
